This is an engaging story with a captivating title that centres around a boy called Denja who is transformed into a good boy. He is rewarded with an academic tour to coastal Kenya by bus. There, he learns many things that are new to him, for example, he travels through a modern tarmac road. This is a symbol of good infrastructure. He learns about modern houses that are built using technology.

The coastal town has a good and interesting lighting system which makes him curious about innovation and through the tourism industry, the boy begins to appreciate the role played by local industry in the country. This book addresses the concerns of industry, innovation and infrastructure embodied in UN Sustainable Development Goal 9.
